Comments about High Windows by Philip Larkin. The power of this poem lies in the journey Larkin makes from the suffocating baseness of the opening stanza to the freedom of the final stanza, it is almost as if the poet breathes in a large gulp of oxygen after struggling with his breathing. Larkin turns our usual perceptions...

But HIGH WINDOWS is not all doom and gloom. There are flashes of life and gaiety, though often, in their case, Philip Larkin himself is a spectator, observing with rueful, self-deprecating humor, as in the opening stanza of "Annus Mirabilis": Sexual intercourse began In nineteen sixty-three (Which was rather late for me)--
